The Public is Invited to Attend Seminar on Domestic Violence

December 4, 2013—In an effort to tackle the problem of violence and abuse, Commissioner Zenaida Denizac, the Volusia County Sheriff's Office and the Domestic Abuse Council are hosting "Breaking the Cycle", a free seminar that addresses this topic. The public is encouraged to attend and learn more about breaking the cycle of domestic violence on Thursday December 19th beginning at 6:30pm at the Deltona City Hall.

The Sheriff's Office will discuss how domestic violence cases are handled, and the Domestic Abuse Council will talk about the problem of domestic violence itself, and will conduct a Question & Answer session afterwards.

The holidays may bring or even increase tension in relationships, and the seminar's partners are working together to educate and inform the community on how to break the cycle of abuse and violence, along with information about the available community-based services.
